

Editorial

“Medicina Modernă” - New Series

I. Popescu

President of the Romanian Academy of Medical Sciences

The Romanian Academy of Medical Sciences has been honored to join the College of Physicians of Bucharest in the new series of “Medicina Modernă”. Definitely, at this moment Romania needs good medical journals, where our medical scientists could publish. The demand is big, particularly since academic promotions are so much related to the articles published in indexed journals. The offer, unfortunately, is still rather small.

As we all know, it is not easy to get a journal indexed (especially in the ISI web of knowledge) and to keep it at such a high level. That implies a lot of effort and a very good team. Without a good and efficient team such an endeavor cannot succeed.

The Romanian Academy of Medical Sciences has more than 200 members, 6 regional branches and 5 sections. The steering committee made great efforts lately to improve the contribution of this old and very prestigious institution to the progress of the medical science in Romania. In this context, contributing together with the College of Physicians of Bucharest to a medical journal is not only a very honoring task, but also a clear necessity.

Therefore, both I and my colleagues from the Academy are determined to make this new series of Medicina Modernă a journal of real scientific value.

Finally, we would kindly invite everybody to submit articles to our Journal and we promise all the support of the reviewers and of the editorial team that the authors may need.

I am sure that together we can obtain fantastic results in the next years and that Medicina Modernă will constantly improve its position at national and international level.

Corresponding author: Irinel Popescu, MD, FACS, FEBS, Professor of Surgery
"Dan Setlacec" Center for General Surgery and Liver Transplantation, Fundeni Clinical Institute
Sos. Fundeni, 258, 022328, Bucharest, Romania e-mail: irinel.popescu220@gmail.com